

Dear Residents of Englewood,

After considering changes to CDC recommendations, state guidelines, and after discussion with the City of Englewood Health Department, the Englewood Public Library is making the following changes, effective May 10, 2021:

The Englewood Public Library will be reopening four public computers available by appointment, for a maximum time limit of 30 minutes. The computers will be socially distanced and masks will be required at all times.

If there are computers that are not reserved, they will be available on a first-come first-served basis.

We will also be offering two quiet study rooms for individual use for up to two hours per session.

Reservations for both computers and for quiet study rooms can be made by calling 201-568-2215, ext. 8227. We will begin taking reservations on May 10.

The library will also end its 72-hour book quarantine upon return of materials. This is also in conjunction with changes to CDC recommendations, after discussion with the City's Health Department, and in line with changes throughout the Bergen County Cooperative Library System. Materials can now be returned to a table facing the side entrance near the circulation desk. This will also allow for materials to be returned to the shelves more quickly, and thus be made available for patron browsing or to be put on hold without delay.

We thank you for continuing to use our services throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. We are continuing to expand both in-person and digital services, including making LinkedIn Learning available to all residents of Englewood and offering Mobile WiFi Hotspots to be checked out.

For more information on any of our services, please feel free to call me at 201-568-2215, ext. 8222 or email me at arthur@englewood.bccls.org.

Sincerely,
